A common fault on a combi-boiler is insufficient water pressure. Your pressure should be between 1 - 1.5 bar on most boilers. When the boiler loses pressure it may go to lockout so before calling an engineer, check the pressure gauge on your boiler and save yourself time and money with this simple check! Another simple error that can occur is something as simple as pressing the reset button. If after ~~these simple checks you find your boiler still does not work, please do not hesitate~~
